Market today

Sideways, follow US midterm election

The SET is expected to move sideways. Investors are closely monitoring the US midterm elections on Nov 3, which could prompt short-term investment caution. Meanwhile, oil prices have eased but remain elevated amid Middle East tensions following additional vessel attacks in the Strait of Hormuz, alongside Iran's threats to expand retaliatory measures if the US resumes military strikes. With negative surrounding factors continuing to weigh on the overall market sentiment, technically the index has dropped sharply to test the 200-day moving average; while brief short-term rebounds may occur, the overall outlook remains bearish.

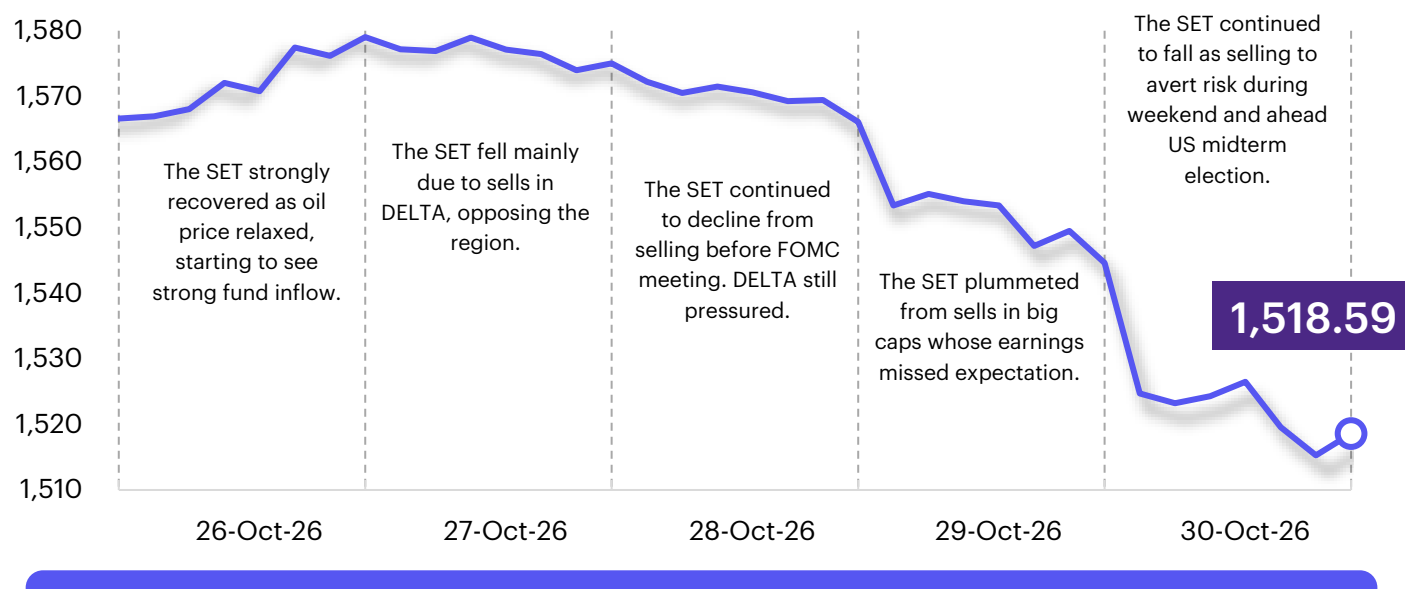

Today's highlights

- Global equity market sentiment has entered a wait-and-see mode to await clarity on the US midterm election, which will determine trade, tariff policy, and Middle East strategy under President Trump's administration. As a result, capital flows are expected to slow down, putting short-term pressure on risk asset sentiment.
- Brent rose 2.4% DoD to close at US$117.64/bbl, driven by severe supply disruption concerns after four tankers exploded in the Strait of Hormuz, alongside Houthi attacks on a Saudi refineries and OPEC+ production falling short of targets. Furthermore, concerns that the conflict could escalate following the US midterm elections provide a positive for upstream energy stocks (PTTEP, PTT).
- South Korea's Oct semiconductor exports surged 259%YoY. This aligns with ZDT Group's meeting with Thailand's Prime Minister to request BOI promotion for an advanced PCB production base, while Thailand's Sep MPI grew 2.1% YoY, driven primarily by the electronics sector, positive for industrial estates (WHA, AMATA) and electronic components (DELTA, HANA, KCE).
- The BoT reported September economic conditions improved from the previous month, supported by exports and Data Center investments, though consumption and government disbursements slowed down. This reflects a K-shaped recovery, positive sentiment for discretionary retails (CRC, CPN, HMPRO, GLOBAL).
- The Rubber Authority of Thailand reported that rubber prices hit a 10-year high, and prices are expected to remain high due to tight global supply. While this is near-term positive for rubber stocks (STA, NER, TEGH), there are risks from higher raw material costs squeezing margins and lower actual sales volumes resulting from supply shortages. Speculation should be approached with caution.

Strategy today

In the near term, we expect the SET to trade sideways, with pressure coming mainly from external uncertainty. The US midterm elections (Nov 3) warrant close monitoring, as the outcome will shape economic policy direction and global capital markets, and may carry implications for the Middle East conflict. The BoE is expected to raise rates at its upcoming meeting. On the domestic front, the market is expected to remain focused on the rolling release of 3Q26 earnings from Real Sector companies, as well as the cabinet's consideration of data center regulatory criteria. The investment strategy is therefore "Selective Buy" with an emphasis on "Buy on Dip".

Support - Resistance: 1510/1500 – 1525/1535

Trading today

We view the SET as likely to move sideways, driven mainly by external uncertainty — particularly the US midterm elections and the Middle East situation — while the domestic market is expected to focus on 3Q26 earnings announcements. Our investment strategy is therefore "Selective Buy" with an emphasis on "Buy on Dip" across 4 trading ideas with specific positives as follows:

1. Earnings momentum plays — Short-term speculation on stock-specific positives this week, targeting stocks expected to report YoY or QoQ earnings growth in 3Q26, with Outperform ratings: TRUE, TU, GULF, KCE, OR, TIDLOR.
2. FDI & tech-infrastructure plays — Stocks set to benefit from the accelerating domestic investment cycle and the government's clean energy restructuring plan, as well as speculation on the cabinet's upcoming consideration of data center regulatory criteria: banks (BBL, KBANK, KTB), industrial estates (WHA, AMATA), electronics (DELTA, HANA, KCE), and renewable energy (GULF, GPSC, GUNKUL).
3. Geopolitical relief plays — For higher-risk-tolerant investors seeking short-term speculation: if the US midterm elections result in a divided government, the market may see some easing of geopolitical concerns, leading to lower energy costs and supporting a recovery in Middle East economic activity and purchasing power: airlines (AAV, THAI), SPP power plants (GPSC, BGRIM), and healthcare (BH, BDMS).
4. Laggard & earnings plays — A safety-focused theme targeting stocks expected to deliver strong 3Q26 earnings growth both YoY and QoQ, with share prices still lagging for a high margin of safety, and strong financial positions: AOT, AP, BCH, BDMS, CPN, TRUE, TU.

Daily Top Picks

BDMS: Expected to face limited impact from external factors and uncertainties. Earnings are projected to return to growth in 3Q26F, with net profit estimated at Bt4.7bn (+8% YoY and +47% QoQ), driven by higher revenue from sustained service demand and seasonal factors, alongside an expected improvement in EBITDA margin. Short-term TP is Bt19.80.

HANA: Expecting a short-term share price recovery following the sharp decline in the previous trading session. The pullback is viewed as in line with global tech stock momentum, while fundamentals remain robust. 3Q26F earnings are projected to show a standout recovery following the production of AI-related goods, which will support earnings over the next 2–3 years. Short-term TP is Bt46.50 for high-risk investors.
